A Message from the Mayor

It gives me great pleasure to extend greetings and a warm welcome to everyone participating in events across Toronto for Credit Education Week Canada.

Hosted by Credit Canada, this initiative raises awareness of the issues surrounding debt and credit problems and informs individuals about tools and resources available in helping them manage their finances. In support of this year's theme "youth and financial literacy," events will take place at high schools in Toronto to educate students about credit, loans and money management.

Money management is a necessary life skill and I applaud Credit Canada for its efforts in educating the public on money matters. Credit Education Week Canada is a wonderful opportunity to impart responsible financial management to young adults who will face important financial decisions. It is also an opportunity to empower the public to make wise financial choices that help, rather than hinder, the attainment of life goals.

Education is not a privilege, it is a choice and the choices our young men and women make will impact their lives and ultimately their success. We as parents, leaders and educators must endeavour to be positive role models, educating our children about money management and helping young people develop financial skills and understanding.

On behalf of Toronto City Council, please accept my best wishes for an enjoyable week and continued success.

Yours truly,
